

World Heritage rego

I AM delighted to see the Mercury's initiative of regular articles where guests talk about their ideas for Tasmania's future ("Wild ideas over cuppa" with Amanda Ducker, June 14). The first guest, Bob Brown, said he would love Tasmania to be known as World Heritage Wilderness Island. With three World Heritage sites in Tasmania, perhaps numberplates could carry the message "Tasmania — World Heritage Isle". Agree or disagree, it is great for ideas to be put on the table to stimulate conversations about what we want for the future of Tasmania. There is growing concern about planning issues and many groups are calling for a more strategic and visionary approach. With good planning, Tasmania is well positioned to become a very special place. Let's start by thinking about the best future for our social, economic and environmental wellbeing. Perhaps the UN Sustainable Development Goals could provide a starting point.

Mercury
20 June 2018

Glenys Jones
Blackmans Bay