Planning problems

HOBART City Council planning committee chairman Briscoe speaks out against a plan for three units on a vacant block in Fisher Avenue in Sandy Bay ("Fears for housing squeeze", Mercury, October 8). He says it doesn't fit in the area, it is too dense, and that three units is pushing the limit, but 24, two-storey townhouses planned for Wynyard St in South Hobart in a dead-end street in the heart of the South Hobart community are fully supported. Where is the consistency?
